

about jennie marlow

Jennie Marlow is principally concerned with human personal creativity, and the way in which survival fear distorts our perceptions, behavior, and choices. Her work is based on groundbreaking new models for the way in which biology and culture conspire to rob us of our most fundamental freedom—freedom of choice—and cause us to live in fear of the uncertain future. Her mission is to provide tools and information about our human nature that will assist us in living authentic lives that are rich with the experiences we desire most in our hearts.

Since 2001, Jennie has placed herself and her channeling gifts in the service of spirit guides who call themselves Spotted Eagle, Grandfather White Elk, and White Buffalo.

These guides are here to help us usher in a new era of human potential. They are here to teach the willing how to transcend their fears and issues, and to live joyfully with the challenges and opportunities of the material plane.

She brings Spotted Eagle's message that overcoming fear is the spiritual journey. Spotted Eagle says that overcoming fear is the primary intention of every soul who comes to the Earth plane. He teaches us that the Earth is a classroom about fear, and that if we are here, we have come to reclaim our power from fear, potentially in this lifetime. He says that every human being alive today shares this intention. We can fulfill it by learning how to live in the present moment, where we can create lives consistent with our longing to experience joy, creativity, and ease.

who are the guides?

Spotted Eagle, Grandfather White Elk, and White Buffalo tell us that they are part of a vast collective of ancient energies whom we might think of as realized beings. Spotted Eagle and Grandfather White Elk tell us that they have lived many human lifetimes on the Earth plane so that their experience of the specific challenges we face here could be fully understood and incorporated into their teachings.

These guides tell us that the Earth-plane is one of the places in the material plane where fear is being actively converted to love. As souls, divine students of creativity, we are learning not to create from our fear, but instead to create from our core of love. When we can embrace the uncertainties that are causing us to be afraid, we are able to create experiences that are rich with the feelings we desire most: joy, creativity, ease, freedom, fun, unconditional love, contribution, and many more essences that we cherish within our hearts.

Spotted Eagle tells us that humanity possesses special gifts. These are: observation, spontaneity, curiosity, faith, transformation, presence, communication, and imagination. Each of us came to the earth plane with a special talent for one of these gifts, which he calls personal magic. Each magic type gives its bearer authentic power to create the life of his or her dreams. Personal magic, he says, is called that because when we are in present time, doing what our natural gifts and talents inspire us to do, our highest possibilities may be actualized. He says that when we look back on our lives, we can see that there were many magical moments, many creation-events that seemed miraculous. There is information contained within these experiences that can offer proof that miracles are not only possible, they live within us as a spiritual potential. And when we master all of the human creative powers of personal magic, we live within a framework of wholeness and true creative power that propels us toward a life of natural joy and ease.

Spotted Eagle has developed a model that is vital to our understanding of all out-of-power human behavior. The model has three components that form a kind of mosaic of specific traits and tendencies. Existential fear—our primary area of resistance to being on the Earth plane—forms the foundation of our most deeply held survival fears. The fundamental polarity is based on the domination and subservience structure that can be observed in the interactions of all primate species, including human beings. The third element is personal magic, which endows us with certain personality traits and gifts. Students of this model say it has given them the ability to deal with fears and issues that have stubbornly resisted resolution for their entire lives. Through the model, which Spotted Eagle calls the Spirit-Mind Mosaic™, we are finally able to understand and navigate the trigger-events that have debilitated us and robbed us of our possibilities. Through the model's profound teachings—and do-diligence on our part to become aware of the machinery for perceptions, behavior, and choices—our authentic, essence-rich lives are at last achievable.

Grandfather White Elk offers us teachings that focus on love and joy. He tells us that we are composed of the Creator's love, and that love is therefore our true and abiding nature. Fear, he says, works insidiously to erode our connection to this love that we are. Grandfather teaches us that our issues and fears describe the places where we have invested our power and energy into the fear-based thinking that is creating blocks to vibrant health, loving relationships, and material well being that is created through the joyful expression of our authenticity.

White Buffalo is the speaker for the entire collective of Jennie Marlow's guides. He oversees this group's work here, and brings to us his contributions on co-creation with Spirit. He offers us profound methods for developing a holistic understanding of our energy in the higher dimensions of reality, and how it relates to our intersection with the Earth plane, in the human body and psyche in this lifetime. He has developed highly sophisticated technologies that are demystifying metaphysics and giving us a deeply practical understanding of how our energy actually works. His ground-breaking techniques for channeling and quantum creativity are propelling many of his students to new levels of realization.

White Buffalo says that each of us has the potential to be a living bridge between the Earth plane and the higher dimensions of reality, where enormous resources of energy, information, and assistance are available to us. He teaches that when we are able to anchor our awareness in the now, and live with full integrity and commitment to our desire for joy, creativity, and ease, we are fully equipped to create these essence feelings, regardless of the mass consciousness, the economy, or world conditions. As living bridges, we are guided and led inexorably to the life of our dreams, and in so doing, transform the collective unconscious with each step we take in our personal and spiritual evolution.

This group of guides tell us that we are on the threshold of the greatest evolutionary change in human history. They say that humanity is facing the fundamental choice that all successful species ultimately face when they begin to tax the resources available to them: to collapse or to change state. This guide-group is offering us a blueprint for a transformed humanity, one that is not driven by a biological imperative to fear the future and dominate the resources. The transformed human being, they say, will be driven instead by a desire to create essence in the now, and will derive power from authenticity, unconditional love, and total present moment awareness. This evolutionary leap, they tell us, will not be biological. It will be spiritual.
